2. Introduction: antirust agent is a chemical that forms a thin film on the metal surface to prevent metal corrosion. The so-called rust is a mixture of oxide and hydroxide formed on the metal surface due to the action of oxygen and water. Iron rust is red, copper rust is green, and aluminum and zinc rust is called white rust. Antirust is generally divided into product antirust between processes and preservation antirust of products. The antirust between processes is to ensure that the parts are not rusted, and the antirust oil film on the surface is easy to clean. The preservation rust directly affects the appearance quality and storage time of products

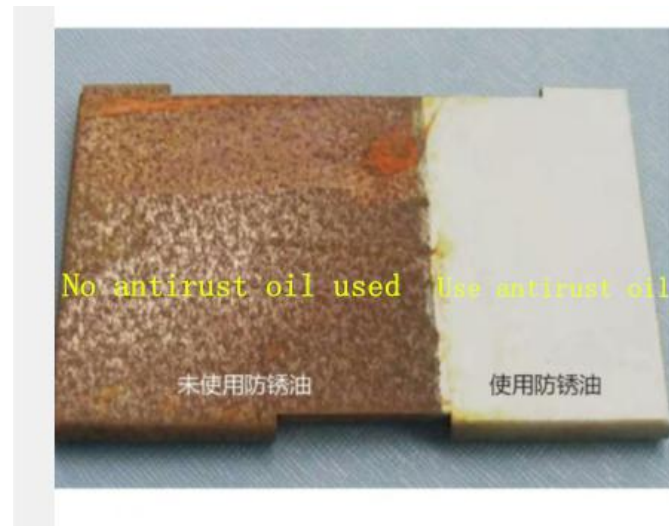

3.Scope of application: it is suitable for rust prevention of iron and steel products, nonferrous metals, semi-finished products and finished products in the process of
